VOL. XLIV — No. 17

MONTREAL, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1954

PRICE: TWO CENTS

DR. J. VIPOND, after a successful return from collecting blood, shows he can even take a pint from a pipe — oops, we mean Bloody Mary.

MARY MONOPOLIZED BY MARAUDING MEN

No clue has yet been uncovered in the mysterious disappearance of Bloody Mary.

The first hint of the abduction came in the form of a phone call to The Daily late Wednesday night; the caller refused to give his name or faculty, but stated he had seen a group of students in the process of carrying the fair damsel out of the Arts Building.

Half an hour later a second phone call was received, and a different voice stated that Bloody Mary was seen disappearing into a car, accompanied by approximately six males. When questioned further, the caller admitted that he neglected to take down the licence number of the car.

Within an interval of five minutes another shadowy soul informed The Daily that he had in his possession the one and only clue to Bloody Mary's whereabouts, that being: "The lions won 8-0."

Yesterday morning an individual with a deep, British-sounding voice telephoned and stated the following: Bloody Mary was kidnapped at 8.30 pm on Wednesday night; the deed was executed by two men, who threw the victim into a car and put her in a safe place where she would remain, to be released under the following conditions:

1. Bloody Mary will be given to the faculty in which 65% of the members have donated blood, provided that Engineering can beat Arts & Science by 15%.
2. Bloody Mary will only be returned if the Blood Clinic tops its objective by 100 pints — i.e. if the Clinic reaches a total of at least 1,750 pints of blood.
3. McGill will only see Bloody Mary again if The Daily agrees to print this article on the first page.

All Undergraduate Faculty Executives have been questioned about this affair, but each has the same answer: "Oh, we didn't do it — not us!" The Blood Clinic Committee denies any affiliation with the event, and to justify its innocence, has offered a reward of one free pint of blood to the person whose information leads to the capture of the kidnappers.

CANADIAN RECORDS FALL CLINIC COLLECTS 377 PINTS

By Bryna Feingold

Breaking all Canadian records, a total of 377 blood pints was collected yesterday at the McGill Blood Donor Clinic.

This new figure raises the week's donations to 1,386, 79% of the 1,650 objective; thus far 39% of the student body have donated their pint.

At the close of yesterday's clinic Pete Rabbot announced that 25 of McGill's football players, being unable to donate at this time, had pledged their blood for future use, and that this amount would be added to the grand total.

Competition between residences stands as follows: at RVC the West and Main wings are leading the East wing by a score of 62 to 59. Altogether about 40% of the residence has given blood. Douglas Hall has 36 or 37% of its resi-

The Clinic Committee has expressed the hope that perhaps today's amount of blood collected might reach 400. "This would mean only 22 more than we collected today," a representative stated. He pointed out that if more people came during the early hours of the clinic, the overflow that inevitably occurs around 4 pm could be taken care of, instead of having to be turned away.

Clinic hours run from 9.30 to 11.30 am, and from 1.15 to 5 pm. Red Cross officials have declared that although they would like to keep the clinic open longer than stipulated, the extra work would tire the nurses sufficiently to lessen their efficiency.

It was last year that the Engineers dreamed up Bloody Mary, McGill's symbol of blood-donating-supremacy, only to have to hand it over to the faculty of Arts and Science which won the competition by a fraction of a percent. This year, although not bodily present now, informed sources are certain Bloody Mary will show herself when penalty-paying time arrives.

At this time the losing faculty will be forced to wash the steps of the winners' building, and, bearing large signs declaring the superiority of the victorious faculty, the losers will have to speak on the excellence of that faculty.

LIBERALS HOLD FIRST MEETING

Yesterday at 1 pm the Liberal Club held its first meeting of the session in the Union Boardroom.

Marvin Gameroff, who was chairing the meeting, welcomed all old and new members.

Immediately the ratification of the Club's constitution was taken up. Mr. Crestohl, who is in charge of the committee, read out the articles of the constitution.

The main purpose of the Club is to promote and make better known the principles of the Canadian Liberal Party. It is also associated with regional organizations of the party: Membership is open to all students at the University, who pay the membership fee of one dollar; business meetings are held weekly.

It was announced that executive elections will be held at the end of November due to the fact that President Gameroff has to retire from his position.

Those attending decided to insert in the constitution the clause that only "members in good standing" shall be eligible to vote at elections and on constitutional matters. A "member in good standing" was defined as anyone having attended five club meetings during the session in question.

Students Residence Destroyed By Fire

Brock Hall, the students residence at the University of British Columbia was totally destroyed by a large fire yesterday. The estimated damage being approximately $400,000.

A lighted cigarette butt which was left on the upperfloor of residence by some careless person is suspected to be the cause of this destructive fire.

The students fire brigade fought the blaze until the cedar roof went up into flames. Meanwhile the remainder of the students formed a long line to remove all their valuables.

University authorities will investigate the causes and the management of firefighting.

"Ukrainian Week" Features Many Different Activities

Under the sponsorship of the Ukrainian Students' Club various activities are scheduled at McGill for "Ukrainian Week," Nov. 1 to Nov. 7.

On Monday Nov. 1, at 8 pm Dr. Arthur Lismer, Canadian painter, will open an Exhibition of Ukrainian Fine Arts. This Exhibition, which will be on display during the entire week in the lecture Hall of the Red path Museum, marks the tenth anniversary of the Ukrainian Centre of Culture and Education, organized in Winnipeg in 1944.

During the week there will be a donation of books on Ukrainian Culture and History presented to the University Library, to add to the collection presented in 1953.

The "Grand Annual Students Ball" will be held on Saturday, Nov. 6, at 8.30 pm at the Cercle Universitaire Hall.

On the occasion of "Ukrainian Week" celebrations there will be a Get-Together of Ukrainian students from New York, Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal. Visiting students will tour Montreal universities and colleges on Saturday, Nov. 6; will hold a joint Dinner-banquet on Saturday; will at the Grand Annual Students Ball, and participate in a series of lectures to be held on Sunday, Nov. 7th, on important current topics, after which there is to be an informal Social.

ANNUAL TO TAKE GRAD PICTURES

Earlier this week the McGill Annual began work on its largest single section. This is the Graduates section in which it is hoped every graduating student will be portrayed. The system that is required to secure the photographs of the 1,200 grads demands the co-operation with the Annual and our photographers, Van Dycks.

A complete week is set aside for various faculties and it is hoped that they will be able to find the very short time that is required. A fee of $3.55 is necessary to cover the extra cost and it also entitles each person to a 4" by 6" mounted copy of their photo. Further copies may be obtained at a reduced rate.

The new address for Van Dycks' is 1121 St. Catherine St. W. where they are open from nine until six.

QUEBEC AND FEDERAL AID

Dr. James has noted that one-sixth of McGill's revenue for the year comes from the government — presumably the Provincial government, as we are still not permitted to accept Federal aid.

Continuation of this aid is necessary if we are to break even financially, and an increase in government grants would be by no means unwelcome. As Dr. James has pointed out, McGill is getting less in government assistance than any university of comparable size in the British Commonwealth.

We cannot expect the Provincial government to increase its contribution to higher education, which has been more than generous in the past. As Premier Duplessis has pointed out, his administration has many other responsibilities, some of which are even more pressing than aid to universities.

Even if increased Provincial grants were possible, we would not like to see too great a proportion of McGill's income coming from a single government. McGill has a great tradition as a private and independent university, and too much financial dependence upon any single source of revenue might gravely jeopardize that position. The Quebec government, we think, is giving as much as it can or should be expected to give towards our university.

What we do have a right to expect, we think, is a settlement of the controversy over Federal aid, and receipt of that aid until a settlement is reached. The fact that our losses in Federal aid are being met by increased Provincial aid in no way justifies Quebec's refusal of funds from Ottawa. It merely alleviates the effects.

The fact still remains that Quebec universities are being penalized for being situated in Quebec. We are still being prevented from accepting benefits received by the other provinces of Canada — benefits for which we are paying no less than they.

Premier Duplessis' only excuse for this stand is based upon a highly debatable interpretation of the British North America Act. He alone of the ten provincial leaders feels that to accept such aid would be to abdicate the provincial right to control of education. We do not agree.

We support the view taken last year by McGill, in its brief to the Tremblay Commission, that:

"... Anybody, whether the Crown, a corporation, a private citizen, or a foreign foundation, may make gifts of its own properties for educational purposes, unless prohibited by some special law. No special law prohibits such gifts in any Province of Canada, and . . . all our universities, without exception, have at one time or another benefitted from the generosity of Canadian citizens and corporate bodies, while most of them have also received aid from American foundations. It has never been suggested that in making such gifts the donors were legislating with respect to education."

If the Quebec Government is really convinced that to allow Quebec universities Federal aid would be an infringement of their constitutional right, let them challenge the legislation concerned in the Supreme Court. Until a Supreme Court decision finds the grants unconstitutional, we can see no justification in withholding them.

GOD'S CAMPAIGN MANAGERS

By Reg Warner

Readers of my recent article "God On Billboards" will realize that I have strong opinions on religion. I write about them because (a) I believe in them, (b) I like to write, and (c) I like to see what the other side has to say.

Against Vulgarization

My last article was against what I term the crude vulgarization of God — advertising campaigns that bring God down to the level of brassieres, featuring fiery gospel reading, hell-fire sermons, loud exhortations, massed emotional singing of such abominations as "Onward Christian Soldiers," and just about everything else short of orgies in the churchyard.

This article is mainly a reply to the letters to the editor printed following the last one.

The first, by Guy Mersereau, does not object to my calling sensationalized religion blasphemous, but objects to my statement, "Religion must be based on reason."

Mr. Mersereau brings out two points, the first being to the effect that, though I may try to find God through reason, others may try to find Him through "music or the company of friends."

Reason Necessary

I dare say they might, but I most certainly don't think they should. I believe that every effort should be made to discourage this sort of thing, to instead steer people toward the path of reason. The emotional search for God has failed miserably for several thousand years. Besides, man, as they say, "is an animal with a brain," and surely the path to our destiny lies through its use.

Emotion Comes Second

His second point is that "some emotional force is indispensable to any reasonable religion." This I will concede. Emotion is a human quality and cannot be avoided — but I maintain that emotion must be used by reason and must not dominate it, as the sorry adherents of Billy Graham.

Immature?

I take it that D.C. Simms considers some of my remarks "Immature" because they display a lack of toleration — a hostile attitude to those with different opinions.

Naturally I am hostile to people who I think are leading the world astray (i.e., leading the public away from reason).

But Mr. Simms need not fear — I am an absolute liberal and my "lack of toleration" is intellectual only. I associate freely with people whose opinions are the antithesis of my own and I would never attempt to run anyone out of town on a rail, even though he be an evangelist.

I am also slightly pilloried by Mr. Simms for making "subjective" remarks; but should not religion be the most personal and subjective of all things?

Not that it is such in these days of organized churches, where religion is a group project for, as the Pewter Mug would say, non-thinkers.

So several conservative church leaders have lauded the work of

Dr. Graham?

What of it?

The less seriously utterances of church leaders are taken, the better for all concerned. A conservative church is, after all, only a radical church on a quieter scale. The theatrical behaviour of the radical churches is esthetically offending, but the conservative churches are often just as much intellectually offending.

However wise and educated their leaders may be, they still seek what I call (I am being subjective, Mr. Simms) a suspension of reasons; that is, they do not permit reason to lead beyond certain basic beliefs which are the tenets of the faith represented by that church.

Reason Twisted

This is common to all churches, Christian and otherwise; churches, by my definition, are all institutions seeking to place a limit on the achievements of reason, twisting reason so that it can become only a tool to arrive at pre-decided conclusions.

One ecclesiastical writer, Thomas Merton, even went so far as to say that the most sublime of human reason was to arrive at the fundamental beliefs of his own church!

Claims Doubted

Possibly the reader can see that this writer is in favor of religion, but against religions; all religions on earth claim to have found God. I have long since severed connections with all of them,

The Idiotic Age

By Clod-Enfant Bedard

Initially, we began at the outset. Thence we proceeded until now. In my analysis of the world, I have borne this in mind, seeing little sense in doing otherwise.

At this point it is clear that I have come to the twentieth century, into which I was thrust against my will. In my unending conflict with this idiotic age, I have amazed myself at all times, for despite the turpulence of my surroundings, which I can never escape, I have preserved a monumental calm.

The most lamentable degradation is to be observed in the intellectual sphere. It was become inextricably fused with the artistic sphere. This is confusion.

The result is that the worst artists become intellectuals, and the worst intellectuals become artists. Thus both groups are in a state of reversed mitosis which leads to the diminution of each, and a consequent dearth of valuable creativity. This dearth has affected everyone in the nation.

Thus thwarted by confusion, the seekers ravage the nation, searching for a drain pipe. Being frustrated at every turn, they yearn to escape. They believe that close interlocking of every facet of human nature will result in a unified whole.

Inasmuch as they overestimate their capacities to achieve this nebulous, euphoristic state, they have managed to develop a medium which is, in a sense, creative. They have established an atmosphere of sex — which is to be deplored.

They have polluted art. They have polluted thinking. They have polluted everything.

They seek to break down the barriers of convention; they are drilling holes in our cherished mores with Freud. They think that they set their minds free by destroying convention. Freedom, escape, ideal — all that is transitory is the currency in which they deal.

And yet their 'freedom' is riotously tragic. No longer can the word freedom be applied to the state they have induced. Sex motivates love, hate, fear and insecurity. Sex permeates literature and painting. Nonetheless the consummation of sex remains as it has remained for centuries.

Let this crop of half-minds escape their frustration in the proper manner, which is beautiful, necessary and natural. Then will art revive and breath again. Art is not motivated by insecurity, libido, or Geometry; it is the expression of strife, of wrong, or spiritual revelation, of the force and the weakness, of the mysterious, of the sought-after. It is the expression of reality.

I say to artists: 'to Hell with you!'

since I believe that none of them have found God.

The purpose of religion is, I believe, to find God, not to assert him.

More about the search for God next week, when I sail into that masterpiece of negative thinking, "God in our Hearts," which was summed up so beautifully in yesterday's Daily by Mr. Ken Marshall.

REDMEN MEET VARSITY IN TORONTO TOMORROW

By MARV GOLDSMITH

The McGill Redmen, still in the Intercollegiate league, still without scholarships, and still looking for their first victory, leave for Toronto today to do battle with the powerful Varsity Blues on Saturday.

The Blues, who trounced the hapless locals last week 43-6, are still rated as the most power-packed squad in the loop, and will have their potent backfield of Muntz, Oneschuk, Pinkney and Stevenson to throw at the Redmen. Flanked by a hard-charging wingline, these men will be very hard to stop, especially since the game is being played in their own backyard.

The Red and White, after practicing tirelessly all week, will have another tough job on their hands and a win for McGill seems an almost inconceivable possibility.

SOCCER

There will not be an Intermediate Soccer game this evening. The game against C.M.R. has been cancelled.

TRACK NOTICE

All members of the Senior and Intermediate track teams and Harrier teams report on Gym floor, Tuesday, November 2, to have pictures taken for the McGill Annual.

Harrier men contact Joe Anderson in the gym as soon as possible.

The last time the Redmen beat Toronto in the Queen City was four years ago, but listen to this — they won by the almost unbelievable score of 25-0. Alas, that was four years ago, and a repeat performance by the locals cannot be expected.

On top of all his other worries, coach Larry Sullivan reports that Hal Biewald has a bad hand that may be broken, and Tom Piper has a damaged leg. Add to this the fact that Mitch Klein has a broken nose that is in the process of mending and that Ed Parente is dead (as far as Sullivan is concerned), the rest of the team shapes up pretty well the same way as last week against Varsity.

Little Kenny Wright will be calling the signals and handling the kicking chores, while Emil Bosacki will back him up in the quarterback slot. Along the line Sullivan is still without the services of Ted Toporowski, but Clyde Whitman, Earl Merling, John Larson, Joe Cronin, Don Wood, Des Desimone, Ed Olszeski, Garnet Bertrand and Francois Leduc will handle the rough stuff up there where nobody sees.

BASKETBALL

Basketball practice for Senior and Intermediate teams starts immediately. All students interested in trying out for the teams report on gym floor after 5 pm.

Senior Cagers Drop Tilt To Georgian Crew, Meet YMHA

McGill's senior cagers suffered their first setback of a new basketball season last Wednesday night dropping a close 55-53 decision to the Georgians of St. George Williams College. The Redmen were leading by 17 points at half time, but, lacking condition, failed to maintain the pace and were overtaken by the steady Georgians.

The game was the first of a round robin tournament scheduled for the Redmen in the City's Golden Ball Tournament. The intercollegiate schedule is not slated to begin until late Winter.

The Redmen tackle the YMHA Blues in their next encounter Saturday night at the YMHA building in Snowdon. Coach Joe Anderson, absent the last game because of the intermediate track meet in Kingston, will be at his usual spot conducting the team from the bench. Anderson is not too concerned about their bout against Sir George, it being the first time the team had played together.

HOCKEY

All those interested in playing senior hockey this year are requested to meet coach Rocky Robillard in the Sir Arthur Currie Gym today between one and two o'clock. Since practices start next week, it is essential that the coach meet those interested in joining the team.

GAELS CAPTURE INTER CINDER CHAMPIONSHIP

Queens successfully defended their Ottawa-St. Lawrence intermediate track championship on Wednesday by piling up 67 points in the 15 events. The Royal Military College was second with 48 points, McGill third with 30, while Sir George Williams picked up 14 points and Macdonald College garnered 5.

The outstanding performers of the day were McGill's George Barclay and A. Neuman of Queens. Barclay won the 440 and the 880 and anchored McGill's winning medley team. Neuman easily ran away from his opposition in the one and three mile events.

In the most exciting race of the afternoon, McGill's mile medley team of Moore, Cains, Duanne and Barclay came through with a last lap victory over Queens. When the stick was passed to Barclay as he began his anchor half-mile the Queens runner had a good 100 yd. lead on him. Barclay turned on the steam and caught the Gael anchor man at the head of the stretch. They battled down to the last few yards where Barclay pulled away to give McGill the win.

Barclay also showed his class in the quarter and half mile events. He took the lead at the start of both races and gradually pulled away from his opponents for easy victories. The only other winner for McGill was A. Whitney in the

REDMEN

Bob Hutchison, Lionel Quinn, Bob Perry, and Herb English will shoulder most of the weight in the backfield aided by such stalwarts as Roger Baikie, Rickie Adrian, Bev Giles and Gerry Anderson. Tony Miller will be back in at the end position after a week's layoff, together with Manny Paumann, Paul Dingle, and Sam Yuska.

In yesterday's Daily, there was an article stressing the disadvantage of such a large budget in the SEC accounts. We will make a little suggestion here and elaborate on it at a later date. Why not use the money "on the students" by making them proud of their football team. That is, give prospective football players a job and perhaps help them with their meals while they are at the University. This may have an effect on the standard of football played here in the future, and, who knows, perhaps give McGill a winner some day.
